I have heard of some technology that could jam cellular phone use without interefering with the airplane communications. Is there an FCC issue with implementing this kind of technology?